

DETROIT GANG WAR CLAIMS NINTH

ARCHDUKE ANXIOUS TO SERVE JAIL TERM

NEW YORK, July 12.—Pressing matters, including "agitation for the restoration of the monarchy," caused Archduke Leopold, of Austria, to occupy a cell in the toms today.

Indicted April 23 for grand larceny and freed on $7,500 bail for trial in October, the archduke was taken into custody with an attorney, who said his royal client could not possibly wait until October for trial, and asked that the charge be disposed of immediately so that if Austria needed a king in a hurry he would be in Europe within call.

The archduke is charged with accepting $20,000 from the sale for $60,000 of a $450,000 diamond necklace which Napoleon gave to Marie Louise. The circlet is the property of the archduke's aunt, the Archduchess Marie Therese, of Austria. She claims the necklace was sold at a figure much too low to a New York jeweler. The archduke took the $20,000 as his share of the sale, it was charged.

General sessions Judge Rosalesky refused to be rushed in the matter and did not agree to advance trial of the charges against the archduke. Meanwhile, Leopold languished in jail, far from his followers whom he claims are so anxious to crown him.

CANDIDATES SWING INTO STRIDE; MAKE TARIFF LAW TARGET

Prohibition Is Also Dominant Issue Of Campaign

COLUMBUS, O., July 12.—Prohibition and the tariff continued today as the dominant issues in the Ohio congressional pre-primary campaign.

United States Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch this week announced that he favors "the enforcement of the present prohibition law." He recalled the fact that, while he was a member of the national house of representatives, he supported the Volstead act and the resolution referring the federal prohibition amendment to the states for ratification. McCulloch, a Republican, is seeking to retain the senatorial toga.

Of the Democratic candidates for the United States senatorial nomination, former Congressman John McSweeney of Wooster, declared in support of the federal prohibition amendment, William W. Durbin, of Kenton, wants "all laws" enforced, former State Representative George S. Myers, of Cleveland, demands that a referendum be held on the prohibition question, and former Congressman Robert J. Bulkley, of Cleveland, favors repeal of the federal prohibition amendment.

Remaining "silent on the dry issue, Charles V. Truax, of Bucyrus, an aspirant for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, today renewed his attack upon the new tariff law and upon the Hoover farm relief program.

"The day I go in as governor of Ohio, Prohibition Commissioner Rupert R. Beetham and all snoots, decoys and informers go out," declared former State Representative Stephen M. Young, of Cleveland, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Arthur P. Lamneck, of Columbus, a Democratic congressional candidate, said he favors the repeal of the Volstead act and a return to the states of the power to determine their policy toward the liquor traffic, consistent with the federal constitution.

Numerous Democratic congressional candidates are issuing vigorous attacks upon the new tariff act. Attention also is being given to the unemployment situation.

Candidates for membership in the next Ohio legislature are being asked by officials of the Ohio State Pharmaceutical Association to give their views on the subject of taxation. Druggists are opposing enactment of a general sales tax law, claiming it would be "unfair and impracticable."

Officials of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce this week took exception to the practice of various organizations and groups which deluge political candidates with questionnaires.

"The requirement of pledges and answers to questionnaires is, in many cases, an attempt to bind public officers to selfish individuals, or organization, programs not of general welfare," reads a letter which was sent to the candidates by the Ohio Chamber of Commerce.

GERMAN, AMERICAN FILM DISPUTE ENDS

PARIS, July 12.—A "complete" agreement between German and American talking picture producers, bringing an end to lengthy disputes over patents and copyrights, has now been reached, it was announced by Will H. Hays, American movie "czar," here today.

The agreement was reached after several weeks of negotiations between German and American sound film producers carried on here under Hays' chairmanship.

According to Hays, the conference disbanded with complete accord between the delegates.

"The agreement reached," Hays announced in a prepared statement, "provides for complete interchangeability of sound recording and reproducing apparatus, freeing the industry from the handicaps of conflicting patents."

A sub-committee was appointed before the conference adjourned to draw up a draft of the agreement.

FEAR KIDNAPING

Asserting that he believed his daughter has been kidnaped, Dr. D. C. McClelleny, Richmond, Va., physician, has sworn out warrants for the arrest of three men in connection with the disappearance of the girl, Mary Frances McClelleny, 20, shown here. Police have been conducting a sweeping search for Miss McClelleny, a Richmond society girl, since she vanished from her home July 1.

AMERICAN ENTRIES SHOW WEAKNESS IN ELIMINATION TEST

Seaworthiness Is Sacrificed To Speed Races Show

NEWPORT, R. I., July 12.—If Shamrock V is a stout ship and will stand up under any sort of a real blow, she will have an excellent chance of winning the America's cup.

What happened out on the white-capped bosom of the Atlantic Ocean yesterday indicates plainly that the four giant racing machines which have been built for the defense of the famous old trophy are apt to break down whenever there is anything approaching a "moderate" breeze.

In the specific vernacular of the sea, a "moderate breeze" is one having a velocity of twenty knots. When such a wind went into effect off Newport yesterday, it disabled Weetamoe, the J. P. Morgan entry, and disrupted one-half of the scheduled cup elimination trials for the day. Enterprise, the Vanderbilt ship was Weetamoe's opponent over a 30-mile triangle.

In the other half of the day's elimination process, Yankee, sailed by Charles Francis Adams, M. H. Hoover's secretary of the navy, easily finished in front of Whirlwind, the Hammond-Thorne syndicate yacht.

On the official wind-gauge of the New York Yacht Club's committee boat the top mark for yesterday's trials was registered at twenty knots. It was not blowing that hard when Weetamoe passed out of the picture. When Weetamoe's halyard block pulled out and let her crew without warning, you can bet all the tea in China that the wind was not above sixteen knots if it was even that.

It looks to your correspondent today as though anything like a 30-knot breeze would put the entire fleet out of business. Seaworthiness has been sacrificed for speed.

It has been said that all Whirlwind needed was a real breeze—one strong enough to wash her lee rail. She is the only one of the cup quartet which is built of wood—mahogany on steel frames—and is heavier on the matter of tonnage than any of the others.

Well, Whirlwind got what she was looking for yesterday and she was heeled over on her ear—so to speak, while her opponent, Yankee, was taking the blow with her lee rail visible to the naked eye.

GERMANY IS FAVORING PROPOSAL

DULL WALKS CALMLY TO ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR HOLDUP MURDER

Pays Penalty For Killing Filling Station Worker

COLUMBUS, O., July 12.—A last-minute surge of courage and fortitude today had served Lawrence Dull, 26, in good stead. For it had enabled him to walk to the electric chair in Ohio State Penitentiary last night with a firm tread and to meet death with a gameness which was characteristic of only a few of the harder and more seasoned types of criminals who have gone before him.

Dull, who was convicted of the shooting last November of Roy Tish, Fostoria filling station attendant, showed some evidence yesterday morning of breaking down before the hour of death arrived, but apparently the consoling influence of religion bolstered him up and instilled new courage to face his doom.

He walked slowly into the death chamber at about 9 p. m., hesitated a moment, then closed his eyes and strode swiftly to the thing which would claim his life with a prayer on his lips. From the time he entered the small death room, which was crowded with an unusually large number of spectators, the condemned man never once opened his eyes.

Witnesses flinched and the stillness of the chamber was broken by the heavy breathing of men who were about to gaze upon an execution for the first time as an unusually long period was consumed by guards in adjusting the straps and electrodes. The current was turned on at approximately 9:04 p. m. and the Seneca County slayer was officially pronounced dead at 9:11 p. m.

Dull's attorney made frantic last minute attempts yesterday to snatch their client from the shadow of death, even going so far as obtaining a statement from Kenneth Brown, Dull's accomplice in the hold-up and murder, who was given a life sentence, changing a part of his story of the Fostoria hold-up.

"We went to Fostoria to hold up the station but did not intend to hold it up then," Brown's statement read but it did not alter material facts, prison officials declared.

Dull's only visitors in the death house yesterday were newspapermen, his father John Dull, Tiffin, having seen his son for the last time on Thursday.

Tish's murderer had served prison sentences before, one at the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield and one in the state prison for larceny.

COLD WEATHER MARS EVENTS

STAMFORD BRIDGE, ENGL., July 12.—In unseasonably cold weather, the combined Princeton-Cornell and Oxford-Cambridge track and field teams clashed before an enthusiastic crowd here today.

The first event on the varied program, the 100-yard dash, was won by the American invaders with ease. C. S. Meinel, of Cornell, finished first, time 10 3/10 seconds.

B. H. Hand, of Princeton, took second place. J. T. Andrews, Oxford undergraduate, was third, while R. L. J. Rinkel, Cambridge star, trailed in fourth place.

CHURCHES REPORT RUSSIA ATHEISTIC

NEW YORK, July 12.—If there is not actual persecution because of religion in Russia there is organized opposition and the promotion of Atheism, a report of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America said today.

The report said Communists in Russia were confident religion would disappear.

According to the report, the face of the whole country of Russia is changing, while new building goes on at a terrific rate. There is no unemployment.

The present period in Russia is "characterized by the hard, intolerant, ruthless quality that marks epochs of revolutionary change," said the report.

FUNERAL MASS SAID FOR LATE CARDINAL

VATICAN CITY, July 12.—A funeral mass for the late Cardinal Vannutelli, dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals, was held in St. Ignatius Church here today.

Twenty-one cardinals, in their colorful robes of office, attended the services. The entire diplomatic corps also was present, as well as Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy.

YOUTH KILLS FATHER TO PROTECT MOTHER

WEAK MENTALITY IS DEFENSE OF OHIOAN FOR KILLING WIFE

Concentrates Effort To Escape First Degree Charge

JEFFERSON, O., July 12.—With his hopes for escaping death in the electric chair pinned upon a plea of "weakened mentality," Tilby Smith, 26, Ashtabula trucking contractor, today sat in county jail here awaiting the resumption of his trial for plotting the murder of his young wife.

Testimony in the trial of Smith, who is accused of conspiring with Mrs. Maude Lowther, 22, quarter-blood Indian girl, to kill his wife, Mrs. Clara Smith, after an illicit love affair of ten days, will be begun Monday by the prosecution.

Court was adjourned yesterday after a jury of twelve men was taken to the scene of Mrs. Smith's murder on lonely Saybrook Center road and opposing counsel had made their opening statements.

C. S. Sheldon, defense counsel, told the jury that the facts in the trial would show that Tilby Smith's mental faculties were either "destroyed, weakened or he never had any at all."

"Smith did arrange his wife's murder. He did drive his Indian girl sweetheart to the lonely road, and he did take his wife there later and 'put her on the spot,'" Sheldon admitted, "but the entire setup of the crime—the way it was bungled from start to finish—will show you that he has not sufficient reasoning power to be guilty of first degree murder."

Prosecuting attorneys stated they will attempt to prove that Smith persuaded Mrs. Lowther to commit the murder and that he plotted the entire crime. They will demand the supreme penalty—Smith's life—for the murder.

TREASURY BALANCE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Treasury balance July 10:—$250,449,788.76; expenditures—$15,637,076.10; customs receipts—$7,002,480.86.

Man Fatally Stabbed After Threatening To Kill Wife

WASHINGTON, July 12.—For ten years John Alt, 55, a carpenter, ruled his family with violence.

Today he is dead—stabbed to death with a butcher knife by his fifteen-year-old son as he ran, revolver in hand, to the home of a neighbor to execute a death threat against his wife.

The son, Henry Frederick Alt, who is held at the detention home, charged with murder, ran to his mother and told her he had killed his father and then calmly telephoned the news to a sister.

The youth will go before a coroner's jury today to tell the story.

The stabbing was the culmination of a family argument over the boy's inability to find work for the vacation period.

Mrs. Lena Alt, 50, wife of the dead man, said her husband had been drinking for several days and returned home in a belligerent mood. She said he asked for the boy and when he was told that he was sleeping began to upbraid her for not making him work.

She said he then rushed upstairs to a bedroom where the boy was asleep and began cursing him. When she attempted to placate him, Alt threatened to shoot her and the whole family, at the same time rushing into an adjoining room where he obtained a revolver. The wife, terror-stricken, rushed from the house with a daughter, Elsie, and took refuge in the home of a neighbor a few doors away.

After chasing them from home, Alt returned to his son's room. During the exchange of words the father drew the pistol and said he was going to hunt his wife and shoot her. The boy followed him through the house to the rear door and, falling to deter him from his purpose, picked up a butcher knife and plunged it into his back.

LONDON, July 12.—Mrs. Rose Winton, 31, said to be a school teacher in the Bronx, New York, was knocked down and killed by an automobile in the east end of London.

ASKS EQUALITY AND TREATY CHANGE FOR SUPPORT OF BRIAND

Removal Of Stigma Of "War Guilt" Is Object Of Vote

BERLIN, July 12.—Asking German "equality" and revision of the Versailles treaty as its price for co-operation, the German government today transmitted to Paris a favorable reply to Foreign Minister Aristide Briand's proposal for a pan-European federation.

Germany's acceptance of the proposal asked that international "equality" be achieved through general disarmament. Germany was forced to disarm under terms of the Versailles treaty, and believes other nations should follow suit.

To what extent Germany wishes revision of the peace treaties was not made known but it is understood removal of the "war guilt" stigma contained in the Versailles document would be one of the principal changes.

While full economic co-operation in line with M. Briand's proposal was promised, it was pointed out emphatically that Germany could not bind herself to join any economic federation formed with the specific purpose of waging commercial war on other nations.

The proposed federation, Germany's reply declared, would have to conform to the dictum of the late German Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann, guiding genius of Germany's post-war rehabilitation, who said:

"Germany does not propose to oppose the United States of America with the United States of Europe." The conditions set forth in Germany's reply were fully expected, as Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy had given the cue for peace treaty revision in his now famous pronouncement of a fortnight ago when he declared that Italy, among other European nations, was dissatisfied with the terms of the Versailles document.

In asking general disarmament for the sake of effecting Germany's "equality" with the rest of Europe, the reply again conforms to the sentiments of Mussolini, whose reply emphatically demanded complete land, sea and air disarmament as a necessary prelude to an economic federation designed to recapture Europe's faltering hold on world trade.

GENERAL STRIKE IS ANSWER TO POLICE

LONDON, July 12.—A partial "hartal" or general strike was observed in Bombay today in protest against police action against independence demonstrators in the Esplanade Maidan, which resulted in injury to 500 Indians, it was stated in an Exchange telegraph dispatch today from Bombay.

Swift punishment was meted out by the British courts to the alleged ringleaders of yesterday's demonstrations which were staged in defiance of a government order. Dhiraj Lal Modi and Dr. Gour, president and vice-president of the Indian congress war council, were sentenced to four months in prison each. Daman Singh, captain of Mahatma Gandhi's volunteers, received a similar sentence, the dispatch stated.

ESTIMATE 71 DIE FROM HEAT

CHICAGO, July 12.—Weather forecasters promised no relief today from the record-breaking heat wave which has stifled the middle west for the past four days, taking an estimated toll of seventy-one lives.

Cities inland from the Great Lakes have consistently reported temperatures of 100 degrees or above. St. Louis, Mo., yesterday reported a temperature of 112 degrees.

Iowa's death toll of twenty-five leads the rest of the central western states while Missouri has recorded twenty-four deaths due to the heat. Ten have died in Minnesota, eight in Illinois, two in Nebraska and two in Kansas, according to reports.

Cool breezes from Lake Michigan have kept temperatures in Chicago, Milwaukee and other lake shore cities below the eighty degree mark.

BLUE SKY VIOLATOR WILL BE RETURNED

COLUMBUS, O., July 12.—Officials of the state division of securities today were arranging for the return to Ohio of Ellis A. Goldberg, Chicago promoter. Goldberg is under arrest in the windy city on a warrant charging him with violating the Ohio Blue-Sky act. He was indicted in Pickaway County. County Prosecutor E. L. Christ, of Circleville, is co-operating in plans for the extradition of Goldberg to Circleville for prosecution.

RACKETEER KILLED BY GANGLAND GUNS; SHOTS RIDDLE BODY

Victim Fifth Within Eight Days In Underworld War

DETROIT, July 12.—The guns of gangland spoke again today when Samuel Cilluffo, 29, alleged racketeer, was shot and killed in his automobile while he was driving on the streets here.

A sedan containing four men crowded the racketeer's coupe to the curb and a volley of shots were fired into the smaller car. Two of the assassins then alighted from the sedan, walked over to the coupe, stepped on the running board and sent another hail of steel-jacketed bullets into the inside of the car. Eleven bullets were found in the slain man's body and twenty others had been embedded in the car.

It was the fifth gangster shooting here in eight days. The outbreaks of the underworld have claimed nine victims.

The carnival of underworld killings started a week ago Thursday night when William Cannon and George Collins, "small-time" Chicago racketeers, were "put on the spot."

Hardly had the sensation over the first slayings died down, when two gunmen invaded the home of Patrolman Barney Roth a week ago this morning and shot and killed Roth and John Meitz, the latter a bootlegger.

Those outrages against law and order were climaxed this week with the slaying of Samuel Joseph Gaglio, brothers and operators of a large liquor cutting plant. Two other single killings occurred here also, which with the one today, brought the toll to nine.

STEEL MERGER CASE ONLY BEGINNING OF BATTLE IS ALLEGED

Decision Will Be Appealed; No Matter Which Wins

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 12.—With trial of the "billion-dollar lawsuit" over the merger of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with Bethlehem Steel Corporation placed in cold storage for the week end adjournment, predictions were freely circulated here today that whatever the outcome of the present case, the battle over the merger will wage on and on, ad infinitum.

There appears to be no doubt that, no matter what decision Judge David G. Jenkins, who is hearing the spectacular case in common pleas court here, hands down, it will be appealed and the fight will be carried to the bitter end.

The end of the present lawsuit is by no means in sight, despite the fact that attorneys for both sides agreed yesterday to confer this morning to draw up statements of fact, thereby saving two or three days of court proceedings. Anti-merger attorneys say it will take a week or more to complete the presentation of the case. The case, they say, will be a long one.

The session yesterday was a monotonous, hum-drum affair at which members of the anti-merger legal corps read depositions taken weeks ago in preparation for the case. Among the depositions was one which was given by Grayson M. P. Murphy, New York broker and director of Bethlehem.

The depositions concerned stock transactions—a story old as ancient in the merger battle.

Testimony, when it is resumed, is expected to center about the unsecured loan of $800,000 by Bethlehem Steel Corporation to Pickands, Mather and Company for the purchase of Sheet and Tube stock to be voted in favor of the merger. The loan was revealed Friday in testimony of Henry Dalton, partner in Pickands, Mather and Company.

TWO FLYERS KILLED AS PLANE CRASHES

DAYTON, O., July 12.—Two Dayton men are dead today as the result of an airplane crash late Friday. Earl Dietrich, 23, pilot, and Geo. Davies, 24, a passenger, lost their lives when the plane in which they were riding fell into a tree two miles south of Dayton. The ship crashed near a swimming pool on the R. H. Grant estate near Centerville.

It is thought that Davies lost control of the plane while he was waving at swimmers in the pool. After turning over several times, the plane was stopped by the tree in front of the water tank.

None of the swimmers was injured.

TOWN SETTLED BY SHAKERS AMazes CENSUS TAKERS

One of the most interesting records of population growth revealed by census reports is that of Shaker Heights, O., a suburb of Cleveland, which was settled in 1828 by 300 Shakers, who abandoned it 50 years ago when their ranks dwindled to fewer than 30. In 1920, when Shaker Heights was incorporated, and Cleveland's railroad magnates, O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, began to make serious efforts to develop it the population stood at 3,000. Today it is one of the most exclusive residential sections of Greater Cleveland and has a population of 17,892, an increase of 1,007 per cent. SHOWERS STILL PROMISED AS RELIEF; SATURDAY IS COOLER

A break in the record-breaking heat wave that has been of alarming duration is expected to occur Sunday in the form of thunder showers, long overdue. Increasing cloudiness is forecast for Saturday night and thunderstorms predicted for Sunday, should they materialize, will be accompanied by cooler temperatures in the afternoon or evening. A moderate temperature is the outlook for Monday.

The mercury was again hovering near the 90 degree mark Saturday but it was not nearly so hot as on Friday, which weathermen in this vicinity characterized as one of the hottest if not actually the warmest day of the year. Saturday morning an area of unseasonably warm weather prevailed over the Mississippi Valley and most southeastern districts, but elsewhere the temperatures over the country were about normal or slightly under. Along the Atlantic coast and more or less generally over the Missouri Valley, showers have fallen.

A moderately accurate low pressure area is now centering over Minnesota apparently moving northeastward over the upper lakes into Canada and a high pressure of moderate intensity covers the northwest and is spreading eastward over the upper plains states. Showery weather precedes this latter area which is attended by fair and slightly cooler weather.

It is believed the further eastward advance of these areas will be favorable to fair and slightly warmer weather in this locality Saturday night, followed on Sunday by increasing cloudiness. Agitation for installation of the softening process at the local plant is said to be backed by Dayton interests and petitions favoring the proposition, bearing signatures of about 800 Xenians, were submitted to the commission Thursday night.

With the petitions was introduced an ordinance declaring an emergency exists and authorizing purchase of a certain type of softener at a cost of $78,000.

The petitions were circulated in Xenia through the local law firm of Marshall and Marshall at the request of Attorney Turner, Dayton.

City Solicitor W. A. Miller said the ordinance was submitted to him Thursday afternoon. Commissioners did not discuss the matter at their meeting.

JONES GOING GOOD ON OPENING NINE

INTERLACHEN COUNTRY CLUB, Minneapolis Minn. July 12.—Starting two strokes behind the pack this morning, Bobby Jones made a gallant gesture towards claiming another championship in golf when he flashed to the turn in 35 in the third round of the national open title event. Jones shot absolute par or better all the way, having three birdies on the first nine and almost getting another at the ninth, in a trap here with his second shot over the lake, he chipped out twelve feet from the pin and the putt for a birdie just twisted out of the hole.

Meanwhile Horatio Smith, the overnight leader with a total of 142 was awaiting the starting signal at the first tee but Tommy Armour, Johnny Farrell, MacDonald Smith, Walter Hagen and other leaders were out on the course. Farrell was 37 to the turn, one over par. Armour was two under 4's at the sixth, Hagen was 5, 4, 3, for the first three to be a stroke over par and Mac Smith had 5's at the first two to be a couple of strokes beyond par going to the fourth.

The trolley is believed to have gotten out of the motorman's control a short while before the car reached the drawbridge.

Traffic had been stopped to permit river traffic to pass when the car, traveling at full clip, came roaring down the track and headed straight for the river.

Witnesses said the motorman made frantic efforts to stop the car before it reached the open space, but apparently its breaks failed to work.

The airplane swoop which carried Carol, the expatriate, to the throne of Rumania will be emulated by Archduke Otto of Hungary, according to reports from Berlin. Otto is reported as having hired a plane in preparation for a flight to Budapest, capital of Hungary, to ascend the throne.

ABSENTEE VOTERS TO OBTAIN BALLOTS BEGINNING MONDAY

Beginning Monday, Greene County voters who expect to be away on primary election day August 12 may obtain absent voter's ballots from Earl Short, clerk of the board of elections, at the office of the county clerk of courts in the Court House.

Absentee ballots may be obtained on and after Monday any time until midnight Saturday, August 9, but all ballots received by the board through the mail up until 12 o'clock noon of election day will be counted.

Numerous changes have been made in the absent voter's law in the new election code, according to Mr. Short.

Absentee ballots may be voted by qualified electors of the county who will be unavoidably absent on election day a distance of more than fifty miles from their precinct. Each applicant is required to make individual application in writing on blanks prepared and furnished for this purpose by the election board, and each application must be sworn to by the applicant. No one is permitted to swear to an application for another person.

Absent voting may be done in two ways. The voter may appear personally before Mr. Short, and vote his ballots immediately, or if he is away from the county he may obtain and mail a sworn application to the clerk of the board. The clerk will send them before a notary public or other such officer, and return them by registered mail to the clerk. Ballots may be voted not more than thirty or less than three days before August 12, primary day.

There is a new provision in the absent voter's law whereby an elector, who by reason of personal illness or physical disability, will be unable to travel from his or her home to the voting booth, may vote an absentee ballot. Such a person, not more than fifteen days before election day, may make an affidavit to that effect, signed by himself and two other electors, and supported by a certificate of the attending physician, and absent voter's ballots will then be mailed to his home. In no case may the clerk of the election board go to any elector's home, or to any other place than his office in the Court House, to vote absent voters.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

EXCEEDINGLY ABUNDANT—Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.—Eph. 3:20, 21.

AUCTIONS

In these days when people move so frequently from town to town, and often move very long distances, auctions of household furniture, farm tools, etc., are a common feature. It is quite an art to run one of these affairs successfully, and get all the value that an owner should obtain.

It is often very distressing to a property owner to see his valued belongings go for a song. He has a feeling of humiliation, that fine and substantial pieces of furniture, dear to him from long associations, have been related to his family history and telling a story of events of his childhood, are swept off to some gloating bargain hunter for a very few dollars.

Admitting a horde of curious people to your cherished home, is bad enough for sensitive folks. If the stock also goes for next to nothing, it is a kind of added humiliation.

The first secret of holding a successful auction, is to advertise it thoroughly. There are always plenty of people who will pay good prices for good articles at these events, if they can be induced to attend them. People sometimes think that old furniture has little cash value, when the reason why they can't get good prices is that they have not made proper efforts to sell it. They may have gone to one or two dealers who are loaded up with just that kind of thing, and could not afford to buy a thing more in that line unless they got it at a great sacrifice.

But if these owners can advertise such an affair so thoroughly that buyers and citizens who want what they have to sell, can be attracted to come and bid then such material often brings very satisfactory prices. Dollars saved in failure to advertise such stuff usually mean a loss in proceeds. There is always someone who wants a good piece of furniture or a useful farm tool, if only he is informed about it.

KEEPING OUR END UP

In most aspects of life, people hate to fall behind. The man who is running a race hates to come in behind his competitors. The boys of an athletic team hate to show less ability than their rivals. In social life people hate to seem less interesting than their associates.

We need more of this spirit in our life as residents in a community. People should hate to fall behind their neighbors. The man who looks at his disorderly grounds should hate to see how poorly his place compares with some neighbor who cleans up. If people could realize what an unfavorable impression is made in our city by those who fall behind, they would not permit themselves to be outdistanced by their neighbors in the care they give their surroundings.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

AS TO "BRAWLING OUT"

If you cannot have respect for the man who is employed by you, let him out. If you do have respect for him, treat him as a man and a gentleman. There is no excuse for rebuking in a fit of temper and bad manners. A man who is working for you. He may sometimes deserve a rebuke, a correction, a reprimand. But never talk to him when either you are angry. You will say more than you mean. Never call down an employe in the presence of others. That is humiliating him. You cannot do that to a man whom you respect.

"DESERVINGS"

This column prints few verses. Mostly it is just comment on this and that. Perhaps in hot weather, when the spirit droops a little, there will be a soothing touch to these lines from an unknown author. The poem is called "Deservings":

This is the height of our deserts:
A little pity for life's hurts;
A little rain, a little sun,
A little sleep when work is done.

A little righteous punishment,
Less for our deeds than their intent;
A little pardon now and then,
Because we are but struggling men.

A little light to show the way,
A little guidance where we stray;
A little love before we pass
To rest beneath the kirkyard grass.

A little faith in days of change,
When life is stark and bare and strange;
A solace when our eyes are wet
With tears of longing and regret.

True, it is that we cannot claim
Unmeasured recompense or blame,
Because our way of life is small;
A little is the sum of all.

TAKING TIME

Perhaps the common mistake of most of us, especially those who live in large cities, is that we do not take time to think. It isn't that we do not have time, but it is because we use our time for something else. It is not easy to think things through, but it can be done. It takes time, leisure, solitude. Do you remember these lines from Emerson:

"We dress our garden, eat our dinners, discuss the household with our wives, and these things make no impression, are forgotten next week; but in the solitude to which every man is always returning, he has a sanity and revelation, which in his passage into new worlds he will always carry with him. Never mind the ridicule, never mind the defeat; up again, old heart—it seems to say, there is victory yet for all justice; and the true romance which the world exists to realize, will be the transformation of genius into practical power."

LEAVING THEM

Our insistence that "something must be done about it" is sometimes the worst policy we can pursue. Often the best way to treat worrisome problems is to go away and leave them. It is a wise man who knows when not to do anything about anything.

WHAT WAS the "wildcat currency?"

President Jackson succeeded in crushing the Bank of the United States and giving great support to the various state banks scattered throughout the country. These banks issued notes which circulated as currency and which formed a large part of the circulating medium of the country. After Jackson destroyed the United States bank these state banks were encouraged to issue notes in larger quantities, and many new banks were formed. Within two years $200,000,000 of their currency was printed and put into circulation. There was no gold or silver behind this paper money, and its value did not exceed that of the paper it was printed on. The panic of 1837 was one of the direct results of this wildcat currency, as it was called.

A West Point Career

For how long a period of time does a West Point cadet have to serve in the army?

When a candidate for West Point enters the academy he is required to sign an engagement for service in the United States army for a period of eight years, beginning with his admission as a cadet, which means he will have to serve four years after his graduation from West Point. He may be discharged by competent authority any time during his course, however.

Wilds of the U. S.

Are there any portions of the United States that are not surveyed?

In the heart of the United States are uninhabited areas, of which some are even unseen for long periods by the eye of man. The National Geographic society points out, in the forests of north central Maine extensive regions, for many months of the year, still know only the hunter and trapper. In certain sections of the Appalachian highlands, where the mountains are isolated, some domains are seldom visited by outsiders. The only actual blank spots in the eastern United States, however, are in the swamp regions of southern Florida and in southwestern Arizona.

Prohibition Fatalities

What is the number of people killed whose deaths were caused directly by prohibition?

The treasury department gave out official figures in the summer of 1929, stating that, since the eighteenth amendment had become effective in 1920, 190 persons have been killed in the enforcement of the prohibition laws. Of these, 135 were citizens killed by prohibition agents, and 55 were prohibition agents who met death in the line of duty.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK. — I was talking to Longacre Hill the other night about a certain restaurant in town and she said:

"The best thing I can say about that place is that the knives there are sharp."

TRIBUTE

Just a little tribute to Joe Schenck who Signed Off in the Big Show the other day.

Just a vaudeville guy; but for eighteen years he and his sidekick, Van, went about the world making people happy.

And may as much be said at the end for you, and for me.

LIFE WELL SPENT

And another golden bowl was broken, and a silver cord loosened not many days ago. William McAdoo, Chief Magistrate, died, after more than fifty years of service, leaving an estate of "less than $5,000."

The phrase, "less than $5,000," is a technical one. I understand the estate was barely less than a tenth of that. Mr. McAdoo had been attorney for his County Board of Health, member of the State Legislature, member of Congress for four terms, Police Commissioner of New York City and Chief City Magistrate for twenty years.

And with that long, honorable record, he died leaving about $500.

As Charles Dickens put it: "Dead Right Reverends and Wrong Reverends of every denomination."

And dying thus, about you, every day!

PARALLEL

The wife of a New York radio executive sued for divorce recently, the burden of her complaint being cruelty. Her husband, she said, made a hell out of their Park Ave. home, by permitting broadcasting celebrities to overrun it.

"My whole life," she said, "has been a hell out of my life!"

A PORTRAIT OF JOHN Q. TILSON

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — "This niche, reserved for my statue in future years, will make a nice background," said Col. John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, when I asked him for his picture for my album of notabilities just before congress adjourned.

With which jocular remark (not necessarily so jocular, either, for plenty of statues are erected to celebrities who deserve them less) the G. O. P. floor leader in the house of representatives leaned comfortably in an otherwise unoccupied cavity in the eastern face of the Capitol building and "our staff photographer" shot him forthwith.

The colonel vouchsafed the information that he was tired with the long session and would be glad of the recess, but I'm blest if he had the look of weariness; of all the men who sit in the seats of the mighty in Washington Colonel Tilson gives me the impression of exercising power with the smallest effort to himself.

Except the president, the three representatives of whom the colonel is one probably have more to say concerning the government than any other individuals in the country.

As a group, perhaps the justices of the U. S. supreme court speak with more authority, but theirs is divided up among nine of them; Speaker Nicholas Longworth, Colonel Tilson and Bertrand H. Snell of the representatives rules committee are but three so that they unquestionably wield more of it per individual.

The senate, it is true, is on a legislative par with the house of representatives, but the senators pull in 96 different directions; in the lower house (no loyal representative will admit that it is lower; it merely is currently so called) the majority party rules and Speaker Longworth, Colonel Tilson and Chairman Snell rule the majority. They do it with the majority's consent, certainly; that is, they can be overthrown, but so can oligarchy. Once chosen, they are as absolute a triumvirate as any sultan-barring revolution.

Speaker Longworth is the showy came just one bum joke after another.

The Duchess read that to me out of a newspaper the other evening; and when she finished she laid down the paper and remarked: "Poor woman!"

It wasn't so much his words the Duchess used, as the tone in which she uttered them.

If I thought for a moment that there was anything personal in that tremolo she mustered, I'd . . . Well, never mind!

FOR THE MODERN MAN

Haberdashers on the Rue de la Quince are now selling suspenders in sets of six pairs, gray, rose, blue, green, tan and orchid chambray.

Times sure has changed. I can picture what would have happened to me back in the days of my early youth if I'd taken off my coat and revealed a pair of orchid chambray suspenders draped across my Gothic shoulder blades.

Pop, as I remember him best, had a 42-inch chest and wore a 17½ collar. He entertained men wearing lavender, orchid or rose and when occasion required, he would back up those same prejudices with a hairy fist that had a swatting power like a mule's left hind leg, in full bloom.

I write this paragraph with the sleeves of my pastel-tinted shirt rolled well above the elbow. Nevertheless, I pause to salute the memory of Pop—a he man!

member of the combination. He sits on the rostrum and presides ostentatiously. To the uninitiated spectator he doubtless appears to be boss of the house of representatives; in reality he does what he, the colonel and Chairman Snell have agreed on previously.

Chairman Snell lays plans, in his rules committee room; maps out programs. He does it in collaboration with Nick and the colonel, but Snell is the expert at this part of the work.

Colonel Tilson is the trio's field commander. In action, he has no time to confer with his colleagues. All three of them consult relative to the general strategy of their campaigns, but the colonel must be ready to meet emergencies on his own initiative.

I believe most critics will concur in regarding him as a kingpin of the house of representatives—not underestimating Nick's importance, or Chairman Snell's, but handing somewhat the predominance in influence among the three to the Nutmeg State congressman.

And yet one does not hear nearly as much concerning Colonel Tilson as of many a representative who has not one-tenth his weight in shaping the destinies of the nation.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

PETER PREFERS NOT TO PASS THE NIGHT IN AN ANT HILL

Ants was an insect of action. No sooner had Peter accepted his invitation to visit Ant Hill than he was ready to start.

"Come on, let's go," said he, but Peter was doubtful. To tell the truth, now it came to the point, the boy was not sure whether he wanted to stop over night in Ant Hill until he had met more of the folks who lived there. Why not yet was he very well acquainted with the Ants who had invited him. However, nothing ventured, nothing won. No body ever had much fun in this world who didn't take chances.

Then Peter had another thought. He couldn't stay away overnight without telling his father and mother.

"If it's just the same to you, dear Ant, I will come to visit you the first thing in the morning. I'm not in the habit of staying out all night and it would never do to upset the family."

"Dear me, no!" Ant agreed with Peter. "Never make folks uncomfortable, that's what I say. They who think of themselves before everybody else are sure to get into trouble. Morning will be time enough, boy, for you to visit the Ant Hill."

"Where do you live? How far away? How do I get there?" Peter's questions came tumbling out of his mouth, one right after the other. "I should hate to enter the wrong gate and be taken for an intruder. I did that once—I tumbled through the roof of a beehive and was nearly stung for my pains. I don't want anything like that to happen again."

Ant looked thoughtful.

"You've got more sense than I have," Ant remarked. "If you don't know where you're going you might land in an enemy's camp and that would be a terrible misfortune. No telling what might happen."

Next: "Under the Horse Chestnut Tree."

For one thing, the colonel is exceedingly modest.

He is just what he looks like—as amiable, kindly an old New Englander (born in Tennessee, by the way, but a perfect Yankee by adoption) as any congressional district ever sent to Washington. He probably likes power, but he is assuredly averse to making the slightest splurge about it.

Moreover, it would not be good politics on the colonel's part to concentrate attention on himself. Let it be known that he is a caller at the White House and a good many astute folk are likely to be able to guess the reason why he called there; it is preferable for him to slip in by a postern entrance and out again just as inconspicuously—then he not only does not have to explain himself; no one who will tell, even is aware he has been there.

Of course, after all, the colonel will not get much of a vacation this season.

This is an election year. It will keep him busy.

To be sure, it is taken for granted that the New Haven district of Connecticut would re-elect him just the same, though he went to the Philippines, as he did last summer. However, he has lots of neighboring congressmen with harder fights on their hands. They will want him to help them. The colonel is a great vote getter.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Salmon Salad Potato Chips
Buttered Beets
Sliced Cucumbers and Onions
Chocolate Charlotte Russe
Milk, Tea or Coffee

This luncheon, dinner or supper menu is easily prepared by even the inexperienced June bride, but it will taste just as good as if it took hours of expert preparation.

Today's Recipes

Salmon Salad—Drain can of salmon, free fish from bones and skin and flake with a silver or wooden fork. Sprinkle with Fresh dressing or lemon juice and the juice of an onion. Peel, seed and chop a small cucumber, a stalk or two of celery, and a few strips of green chopped pepper. Mix with salmon, add mayonnaise and serve on lettuce. If you serve the cucumber and onions sliced, the cucumber may be omitted from the salad and more celery added.

Chocolate Charlotte Russe—One cup evaporated milk, two tablespoons granulated gelatin, two tablespoons cold water, one square bitter chocolate, one-fourth cup boiling water, six tablespoons sugar, pinch salt, three-fourths cup evaporated milk, one-half teaspoon vanilla, eight lady fingers. Heat the one cup of milk to scalding point in top of double boiler. Cool, then chill in a bowl surrounded by iced water and coarse salt. Soften the gelatin in cold water. Melt chocolate over hot water, add boiling water and cook directly over a low flame to a smooth, thickened paste, stirring constantly. Add sugar, salt and the three-fourths cup of evaporated milk and cook two or three minutes longer. Remove from fire and add gelatin, stirring to dissolve. Cool in a pan of cold water. Whip chilled milk with Dover beater. When chocolate mixture begins to set, whip quickly into the whipped milk until the mixture is smooth. Turn into a mold lined with lady fingers.

Neutralize Infections by Use of Salt

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"In going to and from my office daily, I find it necessary to use the subway, and I need not tell you how much crowding, sneezing and coughing I encounter. I dissolve one antiseptic tablet and use a nasal douche, in my office and when I arrive at home. Do you think the continuous use of this harmful?" MR. G.

"The normal secretions of the nose and throat have considerable power to neutralize infections that might be contracted, and, according to Amos, of Johns Hopkins, animal experimentation has shown that the continuous use of antiseptic washes apparently destroys some of their neutralizing power. He, however, advises (especially during epidemics) the use of a normal salt solution, for it not only helps wash away stray germs but it also promotes the neutralizing power of the secretions. (Best follow that with an oily application.)

This normal salt solution is made by pouring a pint and an ounce of boiling water over a level teaspoon of salt and boiling for two or three minutes. This will sterilize it (the extra ounce of water will allow for evaporation, so the solution is finally one pint).

"Dear Doctor: My mother-in-law, who has a cancer of the liver, is planning to come and live with us. As I am in poor health and have four young children at home, I want to know what precautions I should take, as I don't want to run any unnecessary risks. Is it unnecessary to sterilize dishes, clothes, etc., as in tuberculosis?" MRS. B.

"The acidophilus bacillus is a lactic acid bacillus, and it is present only in the milk that has been cultured with it. The other buttermilks have lactic acid bacilli, but not of this strain. It has been found that the acidophilus strain is the most active in generating lactic acid which kills off the putrefactive bacteria, and that it most easily grows in the intestinal tract because, apparently it is the normal bacteria of the tract (it is present in babies' intestines while nursing and before they have any artificial food). But buttermilk of any kind is a very wholesome food, and a large degree of its wholesomeness depends on the fact that it is milk.

Every adult should have one or two glasses a day, or its equivalent in milk dishes, cheese, custards, etc.) and children at least two to four. Too much should not be taken, simply because it may crowd out the other necessary foods.

"Only the usual precautions of cleanliness are necessary in cancer, for the disease is not infectious; so do not worry about you or your children's contracting it. Mrs. B.

If you wish any literature on cancer communicate with the American Society for the Control of Cancer, N. Y. Committee, 3 East 75th Street, New York City.

"Dear Doctor: Are there many few or no acidophilus bacilli in ordinary buttermilk?"

The acidophilus bacillus is a lactic acid bacillus, and it is present only in the milk that has been cultured with it. The other buttermilks have lactic acid bacilli, but not of this strain. Try to Make Marriage a Success

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am just 19 years old and have been married almost a year. Before I was married I ran around with quite a jolly crowd, although every one was respectable, but just fun loving so maybe that will help you to understand just how I feel."

"When I met John I liked him right away, although he was altogether different from the crowd. He did not like parties and dancing, but we had such good times together, just the two of us, and he promised that, as soon as we were married he would let me teach him to dance. But after we were married he changed completely. At times he seems almost cold."

"Now, when he comes home from work, right after supper he either lies down and sleeps for the evening, or goes back to where he works to talk to the boys and sometimes I get so lonesome I just sit down and cry. I have asked him about children, but he always seems so indifferent and changes the subject."

"Now tell me just what I am to do, and if this is the way all married life is, I certainly expected it to be different."

"I have met one of my old boy friends on the street, and he has invited me to go for a ride, and I know he respects me as a married woman and would certainly not expect any more than from a sister. But we used to go to the movies and have the best times. Really, Virginia, I am really tempted, but will not until I have had some advice from you. Is it really wrong? Don't you think it might make my husband up? He does not allow me to go with any of my girl friends, as they dance and have good times. Please answer as soon as possible."

"DISAPPOINTED."

Your husband certainly lacks imagination, not to see how utterly uninteresting your life must be after living the normal life of a young girl. He appears very self-centered and probably is merely thoughtless. Such a life contents him, and it never dawns on him for if he becomes accustomed, through invitations, to people he does like, to keep awake at home during the evening, you may later be able to have some of your old crowd in.

Love treats us very shabbily at times, doesn't it? We fall in love with someone who is utterly different to ourselves, and whose ways of life are very different, and we think we are all that matters. That we can be perfectly happy in one another's society, no matter if we leave all our friends behind. But we soon find that no matter how much we may love one another, we need outside activities and friends to keep normal and happy. And, as I said in a recent article, we need creative imagination to enable us to see the needs of our mates and their reactions to our life together.

Try to understand what makes him unsociable, and to help him to adjust himself so as to have and enjoy some society. Don't scold or cry, but adjust yourself to him and try to help him to a fuller life.

R.: Wasn't it to let your letter and hope you will write me a personal letter some time. No, I don't, in answer to your question, if you remember it.

Trust Expert Only for Face Peel

By GLADYS GLAD

The popularity of the "face peel" is beginning to bring its own problems. In many instances, a face peel proves extremely beneficial, but it is very dangerous for women to use this method of obtaining a new complexion recklessly and ignorantly.

My advice to anyone who contemplates having her face peeled is that she have the job done by an expert. Never undertake the process yourself.

The woman who has any kind of skin eruption should avoid a face peel as she would the plague. The face peel will not cure eruptions. Its action will be just the reverse, as the peels are a source of extreme irritation.

Treatment of the skin after a peel is another big problem. The tender layer of skin that is exposed when the peeling is over must be protected. Otherwise it will darken quickly and easily, it will be unable to throw off the germs in the dust that accumulates in the pores, and various troubles will result if extreme care is not exercised in treating it.

It is usually far better not to wash the new skin with soap and water for at least two or three weeks. No rouges should be used. Powder should be applied sparingly and the powder puffs and soft cloths for removing cold cream should be kept immaculate.

The new skin is almost as tender as a baby's skin, you must remember, and cannot be treated with the same ease with which you ordinarily take care of your skin.

Mid-summer is the extremely hazardous time for face peeling. The summer sun will play havoc with the new summer complexion. Freckles and sunburn will appear much more quickly than on the normal skin. The early spring and fall months are the best time for such operations. And ever then heavy protection of the skin when you expose yourself to the elements is absolutely essential.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED by Phil

Being a demon for statistics and ignoring the heat, we have delved into the records of the National League softball games played so far this season and unearthed the following facts:

To begin with, with the season almost two-thirds over, a total of 112 doubles, twenty-eight triples and forty-two home runs have been made by the six competing teams.

Geyers are the leading home run artists, with thirteen circuit swats to their credit. Maybe this is an unlucky number but we have our doubts. The Lang Chevrolet Co. has made the most doubles, thirty-two, and the Downtown Country Club leads in triples with seven.

The Geyers nine has made twenty-five doubles, six triples and thirteen homers; Lang Chevrolet Co.—thirty-two doubles, four three-baggers and nine homers; D. T. C. Club—nineteen two-baggers, seven triples and five home runs; Graham Paints—thirteen doubles, five triples and seven four-base smacks; Carroll-Binder—twelve two-base hits, three triples and five homers; Criterion—eleven doubles, three triples and three homers.

Bob Yeakley, left fielder for Geyers, is the Babe Ruth of the League. He leads in home runs with four to his credit, while Joe Smittle, of Langs; Howell Huston, of the Downtowners; and Kersey, of Graham Paints, each have hit three round-trippers.

There is a marked scarcity of triples and ten players have each made only two three-baggers. They are: Milburn, "Atlas" Smith, Bob Finlay, Howell Huston, "Polly" Parrett, Joe Smittle, L. Fuller, Paul Boxwell, "Speed" Leopold and Jim Cain.

Joe Smittle and "Happy" Davis, both of Langs, are having a neck and neck race for the distinction of hitting the most doubles. Each has hit seven of the two-base variety.

When Bobby Jones left London on his return to the United States from his golfing triumphs abroad, among the many people who saw him off at Waterloo Station was Albert Eric Carpenter, a bell hop at the Hotel Savoy, where Bobby stayed in London.

Albert Eric is 15 years of age, four feet, six and one-fourth inches in height. His height is important because for a while his height was going to lose him his job.

Telling a friend the story of it just before the boat-trip left, Bobby explained that when he had been at the Savoy two months before, Albert Eric plaintively let him know that it was his last day. At the monthly height examination which maturing bellhops at the Savoy have to undergo, Albert Eric had just succeeded in passing the four feet, six inches mark, in spite of having shaved the soles of his boots beforehand. One of the in-bellhops at the hotel is that no bellhop must be over four feet, six inches in height.

Albert then went on with his tale.

It appears that Bobby had found him a good bellhop and felt sorry for Albert and his growing pains. He had a word with the hotel's general manager, and suggested that instead of bellhopping, Albert Eric would make a good caddy with a little training. He might even be reserved exclusively for the hotel's golfing guests to look after their clubs and so on. Also he could grow as much as he wanted to. Bobby himself promised to take him out for the last three days that remained to him.

So the end of the story was that when Albert went to Waterloo Station he wore, not the trig uniform of a hotel page, but a new lively of gray plus fours and a blue jacket, with the insignia of his new office embroidered on it. He says he is the world's first hotel golf caddy—in London at any rate.

WHITE WILL ATTACK TARIFF AND TAXES

COLUMBUS, O., July 12—"The one question of supreme interest everywhere is: how are we going to make a living and pay our taxes?" said former Congressman George White, Marietta, Democrat gubernatorial candidate, in a gubernatorial speech today, a statement which he issued today.

White has just completed a trip into all sections of Ohio.

"November will disclose that voters are profoundly aroused on the outstanding issues of the campaign—robber tariffs, general unemployment and intolerable tax burdens—all inseparable," White declared.

He found a demand for "specific information as to what has been transpiring in, and around, the statehouse during the past year." He said he proposes to "tell them" during his campaign.

PROFESSOR SAILS OCEAN IN SCHOONER

SALEM, Mass., July 12.—Professor Henry Bianco, 38, head of the Spanish department at Iowa State University, his wife and their seven-year-old daughter set sail today in a thirty-seven foot two-masted schooner bound for the coast of Spain.

The Iowa City, Ia., sailor, who is on a year's leave of absence from his university, carried provisions for two months, although he expected to complete the voyage in about five weeks.

The trio comprised the crew of the small schooner "Evalu," named after the little daughter.

GIBNEY TAMES HARD HITTERS IN BATTLE BEFORE HUGE CROWD

Five Homers Help; Winners Support Pitcher Ably

Superb pitching by John Gibney and hard hitting by his mates proved an effective combination and the Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team became the undisputed leader of the National League by spanking Geyers in decisive fashion, 14 to 1 at the athletic field Friday night.

Langs won in ridiculously easy fashion and the unexpectedly one-sided triumph left the overflow crowd of fans stunned.

Gibney allowed the slugging Geyer team just six hits, all singles, and would have blanked his opponents had it not been for a daring piece of base running by the last half of the ninth by Fred "Bulldog" Smith, Geyer third sacker, who beat out an infield hit to third, stole second, took third on an out at first and scored on an out at first. This deprived the Lang hurler of a well-deserved shutout victory, for up until the final inning only four batters had reached first and none had progressed as far as the middle station.

The Lang team backed up Gibney in excellent style, both in the field and at bat. Playing errorless ball and, the Lang outfit gathered a total of fifteen hits, including five home runs. Four of the circuit blows came in succession with the bases empty in the seventh round.

Geyers were minus the services of Paul Boxwell, regular pitcher, but even with Boxle on the mound the result would probably have been no different as this usually hard hitting team was utterly impotent at the plate.

"Speed" Leopold, who had turned umpire a few weeks ago, was drafted back on the team to pitch the game and hurled well for six innings. Langs scored twice in the first inning on an error, single by Ruse and double by Joe Smittle, but were blanked for the next four stanzas.

In the sixth Langs added three more runs. With one down, Patterson singled and took second on an out at first. Cain singled and Patterson scored when Bottomoff dropped the throw to the plate. Gibney then helped out his own cause with a home run, scoring Cain ahead of him.

The seventh inning was unique in that the first four Lang batters knocked home runs. D. Fuller hit for the circuit and at this point Michael succeeded Leopold on the mound. Ruse, Smittle and L. Fuller hit for all the bases in the order named.

An error, base on balls, double by Ruse and a single by L. Fuller gave Langs another trio of tallies in the eighth. Not satisfied, Langs ended up by scoring twice in the ninth on an error, single by Bell and another error.

The overwhelming victory enabled Langs to square accounts for a 15 to 14 defeat inflicted by Geyers a few weeks ago and gives this team the league leadership by a margin of a full game.

Every Lang player except McCoy took part in the hitting spree. Ruse, with a homer, double and single, led the attack. Lineups:

LANGS TANGLE WITH SPRINGFIELD TEAM

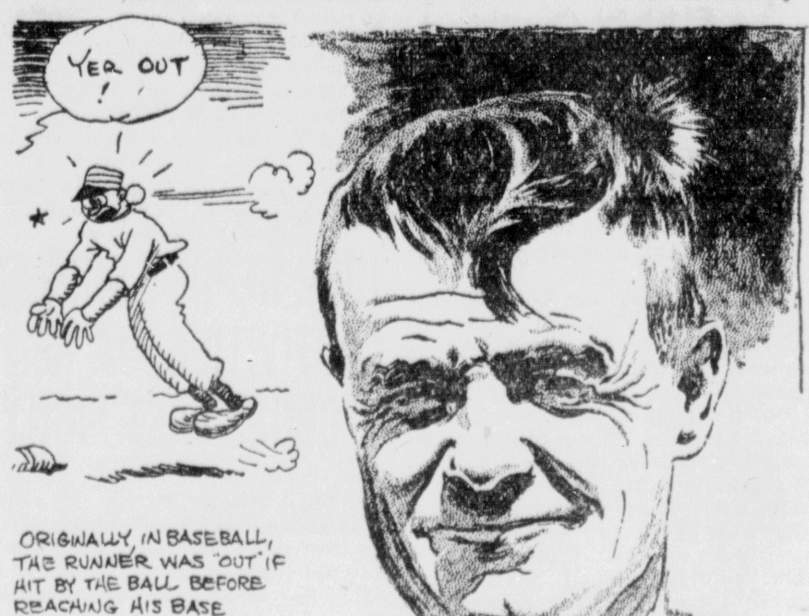

The Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team, present leader of the Xenia National League, will meet the Robbins and Myers, Inc. nine of Springfield in a return game Monday night on the international Harvester Co. diamond at Springfield. The Robbins and Myers team had not been beaten for four years prior to Fourth of July when Langs administered a 5 to 4 setback to this club at the athletic field in Xenia, the contest taking only forty minutes to complete.

VICTIM OF SUICIDE PACT FINALLY DIES

PATERSON, N. J., July 12.—Plans to prosecute Rodetick Meakle, who authorities said shot and killed Jenny Brauer, beautiful waitress and student of philosophy, and then shot himself in a suicide pact, were dropped today. Meakle, son of a Paterson banker, died of his self-inflicted wound in a hospital here.

Meakle was found wandering in the woods near Echo Lake, N. J., on Sunday, twenty-four hours after the body of the girl was discovered in an automobile.

THOSE BOYS AND GIRLS AT THE O. S. AND S. O. HOME who were deprived of summer vacations are enjoying as a substitute outdoor life at Camp Myers V. Cooper, located along the Little Miami River near the Bryan state farm, north of Yellow Springs.

The camp idea was inaugurated last summer and is being continued this summer. It is situated on the opposite side of the river from the Camp Miami, the Boy Scout camp of Tecumseh Council.

Eighty of the older boys spent three weeks at the camp and at present ninety-five of the younger boys ranging from 8 to 12 years of age are making the most of a two-week's stay along the river.

Ernest Blackburn, cottage supervisor and Scoutmaster of the Home of the Boy Scout troop, is in charge of the boys and Fred Neff, physical education director, is assisting him. A regular program is carried out every day and the activities of camp life are many and varied.

Last summer the Home girls were encamped at the Fresh Air Farm near Bellbrook but this summer the girls will occupy the same camp as the boys, commencing a week from next Tuesday. Like the boys, the girls will be divided into two divisions, one composed of older girls and another class of younger girls. Miss Geraldine Witter, physical director of the girls, will be in charge.

The camp facilities include running water obtained through the medium of a hydraulic pump which forces pure water up from a spring in the cliffs.

PERJURY ADMITTED BY MOONEY WITNESS

BALTIMORE, July 12.—John McDonald, one of the chief state witnesses in the trial of Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings in California in 1916, was in custody of the police here today.

McDonald reiterated a statement which was made several years ago that he perjured himself in the Mooney trial by identifying Mooney and Billings as two men he had seen carrying a suitcase near the scene of the preparedness parade in San Francisco just before the fatal explosion.

The long-sought McDonald was held today "for investigation and suspected of being wanted by California authorities." His attorney said he would be willing to return to California if the authorities desire.

Sport Ritticisms by BILL RITT

The Jones law is still in force. Ask any golfer.

Now that the New York commission has revealed there isn't anything like a foul maybe Max Schmeling is a myth.

And Primo Carnera a nightmare.

It seems the Brooklyn Robins won their "place in the sun." And got a good tanning as a result.

What looked like an endurance flight by the Robins has turned out to be nothing but a swell nose dive.

The Red Sox are always on their toes, comments a sport writer. From here it looks like heels.

Now that the British golf and tennis tournaments are over the Americans have left the English with but two possessions: cricket and the king.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 12.—Strength in the food stocks and a number of speculative favorites featured a generally firm week-end session today. Dealings were extremely quiet with the absence of selling pressure influencing a resumption of constructive operations in a broad list of stocks. There were but 110,800 shares turned over in the first half hour of activity, indicating under a half million shares for the session.

Hershey Chocolate jumped almost 5 points to 98, while steady demand for Borden, Loose Wiles, National Dairy, National Biscuit, Corn Products, General Foods and Gold Dust resulted in sharply higher quotations.

FROM TEE TO GREEN

By ROY GROVE
Central Press Golf Writer

That medium approach shot to the green, anywhere from 150 to 170 yards, will, as a rule, scare Mr. Average Golfer to death.

It is very hard for him to make up his mind as to the club to use and how to use it. The general feeling is that the shot is a toss-up between a No. 5, No. 4 or a No. 3. If the No. 5 is used the shot is forced if the No. 3 is selected then the player is inclined to "baby" the shot for fear of going over the green.

These three clubs show a difference of thirty yards between them and that yardage means a great deal when pegging for the pin.

The shot, as played by Bill Livie, one of the better playing and teaching professionals, is most sound, when the difference is a toss-up, and the No. 4 is played with the distance well in mind.

Livie doesn't play much golf but is sure death when he does. To illustrate: He had not played a stroke for one year previous to a southern open of several years ago and upon entering, swung the club for a few strokes and turned in a 70 and a 71 as a medalist. His game, although always sound, was composed of that delicate approach shot to the green of all the way from 150 to 170 yards.

There are two important points in using the No. 4 iron. No. 1: Stance, note where the arms and hands are in (B), No. 2: The follow through at the hole, shown in (A). See that the hands are well over the shaft, especially the left hand.

DAD'S GIRL BY EDNA ROBB WEBSTER THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

CHAPTER 48. "Shall we find a cooler place," Winfield suggested when they had gone. He dared not meet her accusing eyes. "You may take me home, please," she said tersely. "You'll drive about with me for awhile to get some air, won't you?" She consented reluctantly and got into the taxi. "Take the boulevard drive and not too fast," he ordered the driver. They followed the shining asphalt drive through the parks, swung out through Kingsbury and Vandeventer Places, Lindell Terrace, beautiful Forsyth Boulevard. It was June. Moonlight flooded drives, lakes, magnificent landscapes and gardens; the intoxicating perfume of roses filled the air. Winfield watched her white face silently as she watched the mystic scene unrolling before her, like a motion picture reel being projected on a silver screen. She had seen little of the beautiful drives of the city since her arrival there, not having had much leisure time nor a convenient means of going about. He reached for her hand—she drew it away sharply, but not before its touch had sent an electric current through her whole body. "Dee, please, can't you forgive me?" he begged. "But I have forgiven you. Haven't I a right to choose my friends as I please?" "You are not even denying me your friendship?" "You have never seemed to value it highly." "But I did! You can't know what I've suffered!" "Oh, yes you can—" she caught her lip between her teeth at her blunder. "Then you did care?" He seized at her words. "Oh! Dee, I'm so sorry that I hurt you. What can I do when I've said I'm sorry, it was only because I loved you so and my faith in you was so shattered—" "Your faith shattered?" she interrupted him, turning about to gaze at him with amazed interest. "Yes, I was waiting for you to come home New Year's Eve, walking up and down the street, waiting to tell you first that I had completed the formula, when Estelle—" "That's right. Blame someone who had more than any human being could endure. Just leave her out!" "But I'm not blaming her, only trying to explain, Dee. She said you had gone to Moreau's rooms for the evening. That the stage was set like it had been for her a year ago. I thought—" he bowed his head in his hands. "Yes, you thought I wasn't good enough for you. But I'm as much too good for you as I was for Ivan. You say you loved me—then you couldn't trust me. If there is such a thing as love, it is trust and respect and standing by, against whatever the world may think," saidly. "I know," he groaned. "I realize that now, when it is too late. Say it isn't too late, Clara Dee!" he gripped her hands passionately. "But it is too late," she answered quietly. "How did you suddenly come to decide to pardon me? You thought I would accept Ivan's code of life. All those weeks you believed that—" "Until I read that you had been arrested for his murder—" candidly, deeming it better to be honest with her. The revelation stabbed her mercilessly. It had required such material evidence as that to—" Oh! Win," she whispered. "Don't tell me any more. You only make it worse." "A man always does when he tries to explain to a woman," miserably. "You did love me once, Dee. If you'll only try to forgive me and marry me, I'll devote all my life to proving my absolute faith in you." "It couldn't be the same, Win. Something that is broken and mended, always wears a scar. Love could not be so beautiful again. Besides, I could never marry you now, knowing that you are THE Winfield Baxter, as Margaret says. People would say that I married you just to return to my social position and luxurious life." "What do you care about what people would say, if we are happy?" His arm slipped about her slender, soft body. "A very good deal. I've given them all the chance for gossip and lifted brows and insinuating comments, that I'm going to. Besides, for my own sake, I do not think it would be fair. Had Dad wished me to live an idle, insipid existence, he could and would have provided for it." "But he made no objections to your marrying a man with money?" "No, but somehow I feel that he

JUNE REPORT SHOWS ACTIVITIES OF RED CROSS LAST MONTH

The following report for June was submitted to the board of directors of the Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, by Miss Emma F. Lyon, secretary, at the board's monthly meeting Thursday afternoon. Office interviews with applicants in person eighty-nine; by phone, ten; office interviews with consultants in person, forty-five; by phone, forty-five; calls made on applicants in person, sixteen; by phone, eleven; calls made in behalf of applicants in person, eighteen; by phone, twenty-two; letters received, forty-seven; letters sent out, sixty-one; relief in families, eighty-seven; co-operating agencies, thirteen. Twelve soldier cases were brought forward in June; civilian cases brought forward, seventy-four; new and re-opened soldier cases in past month, four; new and re-opened civilian cases in past month, nine; soldier cases closed, two; civilian cases closed, fifteen soldier cases open at end of month, sixteen; civilian cases open at end of month, sixty-eight; soldier cases acted on during month, seven; civilian cases acted on during month, sixty. The organization assisted one ex-serviceman in obtaining a loan on his readjusted compensation; it served in one family with children in the county, where the wage earner was out of work. Thirty-five families were supplied with clothes, hats and shoes for adults and children from the supply closet. Food was supplied in thirteen families where men were out of work; two families where there was illness; four families where men were disabled to such an extent that they could not provide for their families; also four widows with large families were supplied with food. Milk was sent every day to a tubercular patient and also a large family of children. Meals were provided for eight men, three transients were supplied with clothing from the supply closet. The executive secretary made arrangements for two aged men to enter the County Infirmary. One ex-serviceman was given an eye treatment by Drs. Madden and Shields in behalf of the organization. A layette was provided in two cases by the organization and it also assisted a widow with her two daughters, stranded in the city, to get back to their own homes. One man was assisted in obtaining work. The city authorized the Red Cross to serve three families with food where the wage earner was out of work. The organization co-operated with the following outside agencies in its work during June: the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, Cincinnati; and Washington offices; the York County Chapter, American Red Cross, York, Pa.; the Jennie Lind Home, London, O.; the American Red Cross, Cincinnati and the American Red Cross, Naval Hospital, Washington, D. C. The organization appreciated the co-operation of the following local agencies and individuals during the last month: Mrs. Charles Ervin, Mrs. Phyllis Thomas, Miss Eleanor Alexander, the First Presbyterian Church, the Mollie Shaw Shop, Mrs. C. H. Johnson, Mrs. Karl Babb, Miss Carrie Hypes, Mrs. Florence McKeever, Mrs. Grover Crawford, Mrs. Effie Keyes, Mrs. Lois Olcott and Mrs. Jeannette Anderson. Total expenditures for the month amounted to $337.35.

Star Gazing BY RADIE HARRIS

CAROL LOMBARD

Only thing that isn't real about her is her name. Was christened Jane Peters. Adopted "Carol" from a zoologist and "Lombard" from the charming lady she hoped to be like when she grew up. Was not an optimist in vain. Increased the population of Fort Wayne, Ind., on Oct. 6—twenty odd years ago. Moved to California when she was seven years old. Had the foresight to live next door to a motion picture director. Which explains why at the age of ten she satisfied her life-long ambition to become an actress. Was cast as Monte Blue's little sister. Has never played "sister" to a man since. Accident a Handicap. Five years later was well launched on a promising career when she was badly hurt in automobile smash-up. Had twenty-five stitches taken in her face and was incapacitated for a year and a half. Never once brooded about the possibility of permanent disfigurement. Which is the reason she has only small scar on her right cheek now to prove she ever was in accident. As a child always adored Marguerite Clark, but wanted to play roles like Nita Naldi. Now admires Gloria Swanson, but hopes to emulate Jeanne Eagels and Constance Talmadge. Would be perfectly happy if ALL her leading men were Frederick March, Chester Morris and Warner Baxter. Can always tell whether she is going to like a person by looking at their hands. Isn't the least bit interested in their pocketbooks. Never has to look at a menu to order her luncheon. Is always the same—sliced tomatoes with Thousand Island dressing. Hasn't tasted starches of any kind in years. Her figure is the answer to the modern maiden's prayer. Likes designing her own clothes, doing what she wants to do when she wants to do it, sea food, people who can teach her things. Colonial furniture, Donn Bryne and crying at a picture. Straightforward. Hates snappy heroines, meaningless chatter, windstorms, false modesty and having people plan things for her when she has her own plans. Is a terrific bargain hunter. Has but one extravagant yearning to own a priceless emerald ring some day. Will never give vent to any volcanic outbursts. Was in the Santa Barbara earthquake. Drives a Ford and La Salle. Has also been known to drive men "ka ka." Is a fanatic on the subject of astrology and numerology. Would not even name her Alaskan wolf-hound without consulting a numerologist. The poor dog will never know why he is called "Basca." Can't stay away from the studio even when she isn't working. Would like to be in the business end of pictures. Recently was given the thrill of her life when she was asked to sit in on a story conference. Wants to die before she loses her sense of humor. Has an exceptionally long life line.

The Theater

Eight really pretty showgirls, members of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," appeared in court in New York Friday along with Carroll and Jimmy Savo, comedian, charged with taking part in an obscene stage performance.

The police complaint was based, which leads the audience up to a climax of vulgar suggestion. Then comes a quick snuffing of the lights and the dumping of the curtain and you can think what you please. They should really call it the "blushout."

other that the window-dressing scene, in which the beauties posed as wax figures and were dressed by Savo, was,—well, beyond the pale.

In this connection it is interesting to read a review of the production by David P. Senter: "Earl Carroll has gone politician in his annual racket, the 'Vanities'." "In addition to his seasonal exhibition of what a girl shouldn't wear in the summertime, he points out the awful effects of prohibition."

"The scene in the revue is no satire, nor musical comedy whimsy but a serious preachment upon a sociological and political problem which has puzzled greater heads than a Broadway dancing master."

"There are quotations from the Declaration of Independence and the Gettysburg address. If I recall correctly, these were two national developments in which Broadway had no connection. Then the chapters suddenly ask the audience if prohibition was what our lads went over there to fight for in 1917. 'Presto, appears a tableau showing doughboys dancing over the top—or maybe they weren't meant to be dancing. I can't make out what was in the back of Carroll's head in this matter unless he is planning to run for Congress."

"The show, gorgeously produced and costumed, is a remarkable contrast in the flowerhood of showgirl beauties and heavy acres of vegetable language. The favorite device throughout is the 'blackout'."

"Despite all this, Jimmy Savo, Jack Benny, Patsy Kelly and Herb Williams are funny and entertaining. And Vivian Fay dances like a sunbeam. Also, the girls are beautiful. I hope they are dumb as well so that their little pink ears don't hear what isn't good for them to hear."

Earl Carroll, producer of the show, was sent to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta several years ago for perjury in connection with an incident in which he exhibited a showgirl, Joyce Hawley, unclothed in a bath tub filled with wine at a private party.

VIVACITY AND UNSELFISHNESS HELP TO PROMOTE REAL BEAUTY

Mrs. Marcus
Daly

Michael Strange

By ALICE ALDEN
NEW YORK, July 12.—To talk to almost any woman of beauty is generally to be treated to a series of disappointments and a crumbling of all your ideas of beauty and beauties. It is woman who can destroy one's illusions about loveliness with a pitying and some times frankly contemptuous lift of the eyebrow and a shrug of the shoulder. And it is woman who will advance ideas on self-same subject that when they are sincere are both provoking and illuminating. It is generally difficult, of course, to keep any woman interested on the subject of beauty, unless it be her own that is under discussion. One of the exceptions to this almost universal rule is Grace Drayton, famous for her children's drawings but also well known as a brilliant portrait painter and magazine illustrator.

Posing Kills
Grace Drayton is immensely and intensely interested in feminine beauty, not only from a professional viewpoint but as an individual. She has definite ideas of beauty, but is rather reluctant to touch what she considers to be an inflammatory subject. "The world was never more alive to beauty than it is today," she says, "and never was beauty more standardized or reduced to workable formulas." Cosmetics, dress, lauded types of professional beauty, all of these have played or over-played their part in creating standardized beauty, offering in return a bewildering and never ending procession of mediocre prettiness devoid of individuality and charm. And, therefore, Mrs. Drayton finds that only in young children and elderly, even old, women is there true beauty. For beauty, to be real, must be unconscious of itself and its effect on others, insists Mrs. Drayton. The moment a beautiful woman starts to pose or impress with her beauty it is gone, and in its place is revealed a face distorted by selfishness and egotism.

"In Palm Beach a few seasons ago," says Mrs. Drayton, "I was introduced to what I thought to be the most exquisite creature I had ever been privileged to see. She was a Russian princess with red-gold hair, sea-green eyes, perfect features, a perfect form, slim and sinuous and ver yacme of grace. After a half an hour with this woman I had come to the firm conclusion that she was the ugliest woman I had ever known. For in that half hour she revealed such awful qualities, such greed, selfishness, even cruelty, that her beauty seemed but a flimsy mask. Beauty from within creates its own beauty while beauty that is superficial is the easiest to crumble and fade."

The historical beauties of France made for themselves dazzling backgrounds, cultivated their minds and used people for their own ends and motives. They had aids to beauty that were not available to the masses and therefore stood out. But today, every girl knows more about beauty and how to achieve it than did Ninon L'Enclos, Du Barry or Pompadour.

The one type that to Mrs. Drayton typifies beauty, charm and vivacity is what she calls the "tip-tilt Irish" type, with its delightful retousse noses, curling eyelashes and short upper lip all combining to give the face a devastatingly charming upward slant. This type is the spice to life's banquet of beauty, and the girls of this type have the lasting love of one man rather than the fleeting affection of many.

Really Beautiful
Mrs. Drayton is a woman, and a tactful woman at that, and so it is quite difficult to get her to name her ideal beauties. Women of the stage and screen are not beautiful, she says, for they are rarely permitted to be themselves, and commercialized beauty soon becomes stereotyped. But there are two women well known to the social world of New York, whom to Mrs. Drayton are really beautiful. These two are Mrs. Marcus Daly and Michael Strange, the former Mrs. John Barrymore, both of them women who have individualized their personality and type. Both have cultivated many other qualities besides that of beauty. Both are brilliant, charitable and vivacious, and both would have won admiration and homage even if the gods had not endowed them with allure and loveliness.

TRAFFIC SIGNAL AT MAIN AND COLUMBUS

A new type of flash signal, gift of the Greene County Auto Club to the city, was installed at the Main and Columbus St. intersection Friday morning, giving Xenia two automatic devices for regulation of traffic.

The newly-installed signal is suspended in the air and has a two-way, instead of a three-way, control. The signal flashes green and red for fifteen seconds and there is an interval of three or four seconds between the changes in color during which the lights flicker. The amber color is eliminated in this new signal.

RULE OF REASON DESCRIBED AS TEST OF LAW

By Carrington T. Marshall
Chief Justice, Supreme Court,
State of Ohio

(Carrington Tanner Marshall was born at Zanesville, O., June 17, 1869. He is a graduate of Cincinnati Law School. From 1892 to 1920 he practiced law at Zanesville. He has been chief justice of the supreme court of Ohio since 1921.)

Written or statute law is that which is found in the constitution of the state or nation or which has been enacted by the federal congress or the legislatures of the states, or ordained by the councils of cities and villages.

All statutes and ordinances must be in harmony with and not contrary to the provisions of either the state or federal constitutions. That is to say, the constitutions permit the law-making bodies to enact certain kinds of laws and forbid them to enact certain other kinds. It is when they enact the forbidden kind that their laws are said to be unconstitutional.

The unwritten or, as it is usually called, the common law, had its origin in ancient custom or in principles declared by courts in cases then being decided. Custom becomes law only if the custom has existed longer than the memory of man, and ceases to be law whenever any court holds it to be unsound, or a statute is enacted which is contrary to it.

The written or statute law does not go into such minute details as to cover every case which arises in court. It becomes necessary for courts to find out the custom, or what the courts have decided in similar cases. This is what is called "precedent." It frequently happens that the courts of this state have never had a similar case decided by the courts of other states, or the courts of the United States, or even of England.

Many cases decided by the courts of England 200 or 300 years ago are followed by the courts of this country today. A case decided in the distant past and consistently followed to the present time becomes more valuable as a precedent than one more recently decided and when the legal principal has not become firmly established.

People sometimes wonder why there is so much dispute about the law on any given subject and why it is necessary to go to court to find out what it is. The difficulty is that law is a rule of conduct, and judges, lawyers, and the people themselves have different views and notions.

Law is sometimes called the perfection of reason. If it is reason it is law. If it is not reason it is not law.

Do You Read Stewart?

Vice President Curtis and Charles P. Stewart

One of the easiest and most entertaining ways of keeping informed on Washington affairs, is to read the daily letter from the capital written by Charles P. Stewart.

New figures are constantly bobbing up on the national horizon in the nation's capital. Some of them attain substantial national or international fame. Others drop back into oblivion after a briefly brilliant chapter in political or governmental affairs.

It is interesting and instructive to know who these persons are—to know the background that has led up to their position of prominence—to know their views on problems of current importance—to know the events transpiring that fit into the history that is being made every day in Washington.

Charles P. Stewart is particularly qualified to write about these things because he has been doing it for so long. He is known, liked and respected by the personages who run our government, and his knowledge of men and affairs, born of long experience, helps him to write entertainingly about them.

Stewart's column of Washington news appears every day on the editorial page of

CROSSINGS IN BATH TWP. PROTECTED BY NEW FLASH SIGNALS

Flash signals have been installed by the Erie Railroad at two highway crossings in Bath Twp. as safety measures and a further means of warning traffic of approaching trains. One set of warning signals has been placed at the crossing on State Route No. 4, two and a fourth miles west of Osborn, and the other devices at a crossing on the same highway three and a fourth miles west of Enoch.

The new signals will flash red upon the entrance of a train into the circuit at a distance of 2,500 feet from the crossings. It is a single track installation and the lights will continue to flash until the train has cleared the crossing.

This modern protection supplements the standard crossing signs which have heretofore called attention to the location of these crossings.

Attention is called to the fact that even if a train is seen to pass, if the signal is still flashing it indicates another train is approaching—possibly from an opposite direction.

Statistics show that a large number of crossing accidents are caused by autoists or others failing to wait until they are certain another train is not coming, even though one has already passed, before they venture to cross the tracks.
